Chichen Itza, located 200 kms. West of Cancun, 2.15 hrs. on the road, is the most visited archaeological site in the peninsula of Yucatán, due to its extraordinary architecture, beauty and its geographical location. It was founded in the year 514 of our era by the priest Lakin Chan who was also called Itzamna. This is why their people were called since the foundation, chanes or Itzaes. When the Spaniards arrived to Chichen Itza, it had been abandoned as a consequence of the civil war fought with Mayapan. In between 1196 and 1441 the final collapse of this culture took place in the north of the peninsula. The conquerors found the buildings partially in ruins and their names and real use were unknown; this is why the present names are suppositions. The archaeological site is divided in two parts: The Northern Group with great Toltec influence and The Central Group, having for the most part pure Mayan architecture.
