Serotonin Club Satellite Meeting

EPHAR 2008

Keble College, England

The Serotonin Club produced an outstanding international meeting in a historically beautiful academic setting at Keble College in Oxford. The majority of the attendees stayed at the college and were enveloped by the collegiate atmosphere. The weather was a bit on the chilly side, but it did not prevent walking around Oxford to investigate its many colleges. The scientific program was full of excellent presentations and high quality science. For all of this we thank the chief local organizers, i.e., Trevor Sharp, Richard Green, Charles Marsden, Kevin Fone and Nicholas Barnes. The scientific program was organized by the officers and the councilors of the Serotonin Club. The meeting started on Thursday night with a welcome reception and greetings from President Charles Marsden.

Friday morning the students who received the travel fellowships were announced and presented with their certificates.

Travel Awardees

Joël Bockaert, from the University of Montpellier, gave the Page Lecture on the 5-HT<sub>4</sub> receptor, its history and pharmacology. Dr. Bockaert delivered an excellent overview regarding the current knowledge of this banquet on Saturday night was highlighted by the awarding of honorary membership to Manfred Gothert, the organizer of the Serotonin Club meeting in Porto, Portugal.

Two special Journal editions published.

Selected papers from the recent Oxford meeting were chosen for a special edition of Neuropharmacology entitled Serotonin Club at 21 that will be published very soon. In addition Trends in Pharmacology also published an issue dedicated to Serotonin Research, Volume 29 (9) that includes a short article on the history of the Serotonin club. Please download these important two issues that will stimulate your interest in Serotonin and perhaps inspire new research.

Festschrift to Mark the Official Retirement of Professor Charles Marsden from the University of Nottingham

Submitted by Kevin Fone

Many readers will be aware, from the Oxford meeting of the Serotonin Club this summer, that Charles Marsden officially retired from the University of Nottingham at the end of August. To mark the occasion, and celebrate his enormous contribution to neuropharmacology, a day-long Festschrift was held in the Medical School of the University of Nottingham on Wednesday 3rd September. I am delighted to say that the whole event was an enormous success, with well over on hundred people in attendance. Nine speakers from as far away as Melbourne, Australia, New York and California contributed to the event. From left to right, Kevin Fone, Tom Blackburn, Jim Hagan, Andrew Lawrence, Emma Kidd, Nigel Maidment, Allison Fulford and Geoff Bennett are shown with Charles in the centre of the photograph, and Trevor Sharp, who was obviously feeling camera shy, also contributed but managed to escape the picture.

I opened the session with an overview of Charles's career history. The content of each subsequent talk reviewed the speaker's experience gained in their time at Nottingham, during which they had been supervised by Charles or, in the case of Jim, collaborated on research projects. As well as science, each talk included many light-hearted anecdotes relating to their interaction with Charles. As anyone who knows Charles and his vibrant personality and passion for travel will be aware, this was not a difficult task. Indeed, soon the sessions turned into short confessions from neuropharmacologists, including several 'bedtime stories' which cannot be reported here. Charles denied them all of course!

As part of the event the Pro Vice Chancellor with responsibility for the Medical Faculty (Professor Alan Dodson) unveiled a plaque in the recently refurbished research laboratories on E floor in the School of Biomedical Sciences, now named the Charles Marsden Neuroscience Laboratories in honour of the 30 year contribution that Charles made to research in Nottingham. In the evening fifty guests accompanied Charles to Mr. Man's Chinese restaurant in nearby Wollaton Park, and even the monsoon which occurred that evening could not dampen the spirits of all who attended.

Charles will not be leaving us entirely but merely starting a new chapter in his career as an emeritus professor (same email address). However, and I know I am biased, I think this was a wonderful, fitting tribute to a gifted scientist, exceptional mentor and great friend. It was a pleasure to organise and I must pass on many thanks to the British Association for Psychopharmacology, GlaxoSmithKline and Solvay Pharmaceuticals for their generous donations which made the whole event possible.
